

City of Oak Hill Florida

"Where we make fishers of many"

Welcome to Oak Hill

The City of Oak Hill is the southernmost city in Southeast Volusia County. The location is rich in early Florida history. The City of Oak Hill was first chartered in 1927.

Located in the South East Volusia Corridor, it is an easy commute from Oak Hill to New Smyrna or Edgewater, to the Canaveral Seashore Park, or to Kennedy Space Center. Southeast Volusia is home to the cities of New Smyrna Beach, Edgewater and Oak Hill. Oak Hill holds the smallest population of the three communities with 1,830 residents who enjoy its secluded lifestyle.

The unspoiled beauty of rural southeast Florida surrounds you in Oak Hill. This small community borders the Canaveral National Seashore Park, neighbors the Indian River Lagoon and is the second highest elevation in Florida. Over 4,000 plants and animals inhabit the Lagoon with much of the bird life and subtropical flora spilling onto Oak Hill's shores.

Oak Hill was appropriately named for its many grand Oak trees draped in Spanish moss that give it a unique charm all its own and you'll find four community parks, several fishing camps, a fishing pier and a bird look-out over the wetlands. As well, a recreation program, civic organizations, local churches and an active Boys & Girls Club offer opportunities to stay out and active.

Beautiful 19th century homes add to Oak Hill's history-rich surroundings. A section of the National Canaveral Seashore Park extends into an Oak Hill historic site called "Seminole Rest". A visit here will uncover two turn-of-the-century homes and several Timucuan Mounds that are evidence of past generations who lived here.
